STOCKS FIRM AND HIGHER

The Opening Showed Slight Gains, and Western Union Was Unusually Strong.

The Weekly Bank Statement Revealed a Loss of $2,000,000, but It Had No Appreciable Effect on the Course of Prices.

Prime mercantile paper, 31/2 @5 per cent. Sterling exchange was quiet but steady at $4.86 for sixty-day bills and $4.87% for demand.

The total sales of stocks were 103,226 shares, including the following: Atchison, 9.450; Chicago Gas, 2.055; Delaware & Hudson, 3,000; Erie, 4,400; Manhattan, 4,200; Northern Pacific preferred, 2,400; New England, 6,400; Reading, 9,300; Richmond & West Point, 5,200; St. Paul, 4,660; Union Pacific, 3,000; Western Union, 13,700.

The general temper of the stock market Saturday was firm, and the opening was made at slight gains. The great feature of the day was the unusual animation and strength displayed in Western Union, which rose 1 per cent, to 90, which point it has not reached for a long time. Manhattan kept with it, continuing its rise to 12519, and while neither of these were able to retain all of their gains they were maintained on a higher level than the rest of the market. The bears attacked Atchison and broke it 1 per cent. Beside the stocks mentioned no special animation or strength was seen outside of the industrials. In those the gains were not important. The bank statement showed a loss of over $2,000,000 in the surplus reserve, but this was largely due to an expansion of loaus, and no apparent effect upon the course of prices. The late trading developed a firmer temper, and the market closed quiet to dull at insignineant changes for the day. in all cases except in Manhattan, which is up 1 per cent. The transactions reached 99,406 listed and 3,820 unlisted.

Railroad bonds were rather more active than stocks, and rather heavy, though, only in the Richmond & West Point fives, which lost 17s, at 57, and Richmond & Danville consols 1, to 10%. The trading reached

PARDRIDGE THE BEAR KING

In the Face of Threatened Ruin He Fee the Wheat Market, Winning the Day.

Chicago Board of Trade Galleries Packed with Sight-Seers to Behold His Annihilation, but He Made the Bulls Run.

TRADING AT CHICAGO.

Wheat Closes Nearly 3 Cents Under the Top Price of the Day. CHICAGO, April 9.-A bolder plunge was probably never witnessed in the Chicago wheat market than that made by Edward Pardridge to-day. Last night, with estimated short sales of 10,000,000 bushels chalked up against him and with the quotations shooting skyward, every jump in the price meaning a personal loss of $100, 000, the odd little speculator was believed to be about ready to throw up his hands in despair. To-night all was changed. Pardridge was again a conqueror. A regiment of brokers at his orders had dashed into the pit at the very outset of the day and fought his enemies to a standstill. Before the day ended he pulled down the price over 3 cents a bushel from the highest point reached. The close was within isc of the lowest price of the day. Pardridge in person was on the floor bright and early. The galleries and pits were crowded to suffocation in expectation of seeing a cyclone when, losing his nerve, he should attempt to buy instead of sell. The noted plunger was earnestly rushing from one friend to another and making his remarks jerky and emphatic, but that was all the emotion he displayed. He denied that he had lost or would lose a nickel, and declared:

"When I lose I lose for keeps, but I am not worrying about loss just now. I'm feeling all right. With that he again dove for the pit When approached at another opportunity he emphatically asserted that nothing would drive him to cover upless the market went to $1 a bushel. The opening was the wildest witnessed for some time, and prices varied 1 sc within the first few seconds in different parts of the crowd, sales being made at 12@112 over the closing figures of yesterday. Bull news was pientiful and but for Pardridge's bold tactics would have had marked effect, for bear advices were scarce indeed. The trade then seemed to be drifting more into July and the bad crop reports were having a good deal of influence, as while May was lower July was decided-ly higher. A telegram from Kansas City gave the information that the State

Agricultural department of Missouri put the condition of the crop in that State at 69, a heavy decrease from the outlook in PARDRIDGE HELD HIS NERVE. Pardridge, far from showing evidence of weakening, was bustling about denouncing the scare as idiotic and had his brokers selling incessantly. The bulk of the sales at the opening were at 854c. The market went off to 84c on Pardridge's selling, then up to $5c, held for a considerable time at 844c, then near noon shot up to $54c. Here the demand fell off and the price went to 84%c, and at 12 o'clock was about 84%c. against 813sc at the close yesterday. After the noon hour the wheat market began to weaken. The shorts seemed to be well covered and the moment the buying came to a balt the bears took fresh courage and began to sell. There seemed to be no one with courage enough to extend any support, and Pardridge continued his slugging tactics, and when the break started longs began to unload and the pyramids tumbled May went off quickly to 8534c, reacted some, and at 1 o'clock was 837sc. Then some operators became very bold, declaring that the Dodge estimate on wheat condition will be 83 to 15 per cent. or better. This was followed by such selling as caused many to believe that some houses had inside information from Washington. General selling put the May price off to 82%c bid at the close, or 14c under the close last night of the regular session, which was 2c under the later curb prices. It was reported that George Haines, who traded in a small way, had failed, The corn market was not sympathizing to any great extent with the advance in wheat at the opening, but was in full accord with it on the decline. The highest price of the day was only 'sc above the closing price of the day before, and its resting price to-day was at a decline of 1 c. May opened at 41%c, touched 41%c, sold off to 10%c, and closed at 40%c bid. There was both realizing of long corn and selling short. Pardridge was a tree seller of July and Cudaby for May. Oats were active, and shot up to 30'se for May on a rush of shorts to cover, but the close, 294c, was 'sc under last night's clos-The provision trade was dull and the market beavy. Outside interest which vesterday was giving some signs of reawakening, was again conspicuously absent. Pork made its best price at the opening, and had only recovered from 24c to 5c from its lowest point at the close. Lard and ribs were equally as weak as pork. Pork since yesterday is from 740 to 100 lower; ribs are off .05c, and lard about the same as ribs.

The estimated receipts for Monday are: Sixty cars of wheat, 200 cars of corn, 1 5 cars of oats, and 24,000 head of hogs. The leading futures ranged as follows:

Women's Shoes.

I cannot understand woman's sublime indifference to her feet. I know she is altogether conscious of their existence by the way she carls them up under her draperies. The truth is, an old shoe is like an old pair of corsets, not to be parted with so long as a vestige of respectibility remains. IN GRUB SIREET. Some of the Now World Famous Men Who Worked and Starved There.

London Colbeton. Up to the seventeenth century Grub street was on the outskirts of London. It was a street tenanted by bowyers, fletchers, makers of bow strings, and everything else that appertained to archery. Later on John fox lived in Grab street, though he did not write his famous "Book of Martyrs" there. Fox's residence in Grub street occurred about 1572. John Speed, the tailor archaeologist, was a resident of Grab street, where he was famous as the most responsible parent, having a family of twelve sons and six daughters. Grub street of old and Milton street to-day is noted for its great number of alleys and courts. From Grub street issued such famous old literary skits as "Jack the Giant-killer," "Tom Hickathrift," "The Wise Men of Gotham." and scores of others now a part of every boy's library. Probably literary men first began to populate Grub street in any numbers during Cromwell's time. Then a great number of seditions and libelous pamphlets were circulated, and as the authors, for safety, had to seek obscure living places, they found a fitting retreat in the maze of alleys which webbed the Grubstreet section. At any rate, by the commencement of the eighteenth century Grub street had become quite notorious as the poor authors' quarter of London. All the authors but a very favored few were poor then. The life of a Grub-street author was that of a modern tramp, only he did more work and obtained fewer square meals. But they were true Bohemians always. When Dr. Johnson was a resident of Grub street he made the acquaintance of a poet named Samuel Boyse, whose poem on the Deity and other works had earned him high praise. Boyse could not go abroad to seek work because his clothes were in pawn, so he lay abed with his arms thrust through two holes in the insective blanket, which was his only covering, writing and starving. Johnson raised enough money to get his clothes for him, but two days later Boyse was in bed again eating a stew of beel and musbrooms p chased by the repawning of his suit. "I might as well eat while I may," he said, for I must some day starve whether I will

Another Grub-street friend of Johnson's was Derrick, of whom he wrote: "I honor Derrick for his strength of mind. One night when Floyd. another poor author, was wandering about the streets at night, he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state; will you go home with me to my lodginge?" and they turned in on the bulk together, like the good fellows they were. Will any man say that they did not deserve a sounder sleep than a Vanderbilt on his bed of down? One of the most extraordinary of the Grub-street colony of Johnson's time was the poet, Richard Savage, whose life is perhaps the best work of the lexicographer which exists. Savage claimed to be the illegitimate child of Lord Rivers by the Countess of Macclesfield, who was divorced from her husband on account of the criminality of which the poet was the fruit. The wretched life of Savage, neglected in childhood by his unnatural parent, and persecuted by her when he was old enough to suffer by it, is well known.

A Girl's Watch.

Kansas City Star. It was a girl who bought a watch of a eweler who warranted it for a year. What does that mean?" she asked. "We keep it in order for you," was the eply. "That is, we regulate it. Of course if you broke the crystal, or anything like that, we-"

"Oh, of course." In a week or so she was back. "My watch does go so queerly," she said. "If you will allow me to look at it, mad-"Oh, yes, and she began fumbling at her dress, a blush mounting brighter and brighter. Presently, with an air of determination, she buttoned her loose-front sealskin, and, slipping her hands under it, continued operations on a more extensive scale. In a minute there was a little rustle and a sharp clink on the floor. She picked up the watch, quite as a matter of course, and passed it to the clerk, who stood "It keeps all sorts of time," she said,

The clerk suppressed his feelings and only remarked mildly: "A watch needs very careful handling." "Oh. I'm ever so careful of mine. I always carry it inside my dress, so it won't get scratched. I ought to have brought it n before, it has been going so badly; but I left it under my pillow the other morning and Mary changed the bed and it got into the laundry. It wasn't boiled, you know-just soaked a little while. Mary is very careful and she found it." "I fear, miss, we shall be obliged to charge you for adjusting this watch. It seems to be in rather a bad way." "Oh, I think that is awful. It was warranted for a whole year, and here I've had it only about a week, and I have hardly used it at all!"

What are you going to do with such peo-

Wilkle Collins as a Bon Vivant. Edmund Yates, in New York Tribune. Those who were intimate with Wilkie Collins were well aware that the desperate attacks of the gout by which his latter days were afflicted had been well earned by the distinguished novelist's devotion to what are enphemistically called the pleasures of the table. This opinion will probably be indorsed by any one who may come across a curious little pamphlet printed by Ehrmann Freres, of Gresham Building, who acted as wine merchants to Mr. Collins, and who in consequence of some dispute with the distinguished novelist's excontors have still in their possession a certain quantity of champagne and cognac which was held in reserve for their customer, and was left in their bands at the time of his dath, and who give in fac-simtle Mr. Collins's letters testifying to the excellence of their wares. The tone of these letters savors of the bon vivant. There are constant references to the excellent and too tempting old cognac and delicious old brut champagne, about which he writes before the sample bottle was opened: "I thought of asking for six dozen. As usual the experience of the first glass decided me on doubling the order. I will, therefore, ask you to reserve for me twelve dozen." And there is a groan of sadness in the confession that even the best brandy must be varied as a drink

Gladstone and His Granddaughter. A recent visitor to Hawarden is quoted by the Pail Mall Gazette as saying: "I never anw a prettier sight than when she ran through the open door which divides the drawing-room from the Grand Old Man's sanctuary, and, pulling at the lapels of his dressing-gown, drew him imperiously away from Homer or the Blue Book, or whatever was engaging him. The first intimation we had in the next room was a peal of laughter on Mr. Gladstone's part at the obvious necessity of capitulating to that obvious necessity, as musical and hearty as ever came from human lips, for his laugh is one of his greatest attractions. Presently the Grand Old Man and the little child, separated by eighty years of time, came hand in hand together into the drawing-room. Mrs. Gladstone runs to the piano and strikes up a lively waltz tune, and in a second the two partners are dancing together, the Grand Old Man putting into his pirouettes a lot of funny, old-fashioned litte steps, learned of our great-grandmothers seventy-five years ago, which it was impossible to view without delight and applause, although so much pathos mingled with comedy in the touch-

The Inaccuracies of Art. New York Letter. "I never saw an artist yet who could correctly paint a horseshoe," remarked a triend of mine, pausing before a Broadway picture store. "They invariably paint it with an equal number of nails on each side -sometimes three, sometimes four, and even five nails. As a matter of fact, there are four on one side and three on the other the crystal stream. The same peculiarity is also poetically attributed to the horse and other animals, the model of the poet baving probably been the house cat.

Best Time for Black Bass Fishing.

American Argler We have taken black bass with the fly when chub tishing in March. At that time they seem to be stupid and loggy, very much like the tront when taken in ice-cold water on a blustering opening day. From cont own experience we think the best months for stream fly fishing for black bass are June and September, yet we have been successful during the intermediate months, and one season as late as Nov. 15, at which time the bass rose victously to the fly and fought hard.
